

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Centre for Diaspora and Transnational Studies

Professor Darryl Li

Department of Anthropology
University of Chicago

Jihad as Universalism

THURSDAY, 6 APRIL 2017

16:00-17:30 PM

Jackman Humanities Building, Room 318
170 St. George Street

Today the specter of transnational armed Islamism — “jihad” — is widely seen as a kind of universal enemy to mankind, the ultimate antithesis to liberal values of tolerance and rationality. Yet such jihads -- be they in Afghanistan, Chechnya, Iraq, or Somalia -- also present themselves as universalist projects carrying a message for all of humanity and support this claim in part by boasting of their own national, racial, and ethnic diversity. This presentation will explore the question of how to theorize universalism as a historically and ethnographically legible object by reference to Arab and Bosnian jihad fighters in the 1992-1995 war in Bosnia-Herzegovina and their encounters with the “International Community,” as embodied by United Nations peacekeepers.

Darryl Li is an Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Chicago and an attorney who has participated in litigation against the U.S. national security state.

Co-sponsored with the Institute of Islamic Studies, U of T

FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC