RE: McGill Journal of Law and Health Call for Papers

The McGill Journal of Law and Health (MJLH) is an academic, peer-reviewed journal that publishes multidisciplinary articles on the intersection of health and law, both within Canada and at the international level. Now in our ninth year, we have a history of publishing research by major Canadian scholars working in this field. Our journal is entirely run by students of the Faculty of Law at McGill University (Montreal, Canada). All of our archives are publicly available at <http://mjlh.mcgill.ca>, as well as by subscription in the Hein Online Law Journal Library.

The MJLH is currently seeking submissions for an upcoming issue. We welcome contributions on any aspect of health law, including but not limited to medical malpractice, regulation of biotechnology and pharmaceuticals, constitutional rights related to health and health care, and ethical dimensions of health law and policy. The MJLH publishes full-length articles as well as shorter comments and works of a similar nature.

Our next deadline for submissions is October 15th, 2015. Complete submission guidelines are available on our website at <http://mjlh.mcgill.ca> (select “Submissions” from the menu).

Should you wish to learn more about the MJLH or have questions about publishing in our journal, we invite you to contact us. We also encourage you to share this call for papers widely with any colleagues who may be interested.

Sincerely,
