

UOFT CAMPUS AMBASSADORS

MEGHAN KERR, MD
CANDIDATE

VICTORIA HALDANE, PHD
STUDENT AT IHPME

YINA SHAN, MPH
CANDIDATE AT DLSPH

THREE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO STUDENTS

have been named 2020 Planetary Health Campus Ambassadors by the Planetary Health Alliance. The Planetary Health Campus Ambassador (PHCA) program is a competitively-awarded leadership opportunity for students committed to educating their campus community about planetary health. Planetary health is an interdisciplinary field that aims to understand and address global environmental change and its health impacts.

Yina, Meghan, and Victoria will be working together to organize events and engage students, faculty, and staff across the three University of Toronto campuses on issues related to planetary health. Their first initiative is scheduled for early April to coincide with the Global Month of Climate Action and the April 3 Global Climate Strike. Details will follow in the coming weeks.

Please take a moment to fill out a short survey on your interest in planetary health. Your input will help the ambassadors to better deliver planetary health initiatives and to connect those interested in planetary health action and advocacy at University of Toronto. Thank you, and we look forward to hearing from you!

Link to survey: <https://forms.gle/B5RGX6sZc2gS1fZ38>

Connect with us at: uoftpha@gmail.com

