Reproductive and Sexual Health Law Developments and Resources

<http://reprohealthlaw.wordpress.com/>

The REPROHEALTHLAW Blog is an information service for faculty, staff, students, alumni, and friends of the International Reproductive and Sexual Health Law Program at the University of Toronto's Faculty of Law.

The purposes of REPROHEALTHLAW are to:

- (1) make legal scholarship in our field more accessible;
- (2) publicize developments in international and comparative law and policy relating to reproductive and sexual health
- (3) advertise relevant calls for papers and career-enhancing opportunities
- (4) make past mailings universally available in a user-friendly searchable form.

To subscribe, click here: <http://reprohealthlaw.wordpress.com/> then enter your preferred email address in the upper right corner of the blog, then check that email account to confirm the subscription.

The service can be halted anytime from the same corner of the blog.

The International Reproductive and Sexual Health Law Program aims to improve protection and promotion of rights relating to reproductive and sexual health through: capacity building; research and publications; legal advisory and advocacy work; and the provision of legal information resources. For more information about our Program, see <http://www.law.utoronto.ca/programs/reprohealth.html>

Yours sincerely,

Linda Hutjens, Ph.D.

Co-ordinator, International Reproductive and Sexual Health Law Programme, and Assistant to Professors Rebecca J. Cook and Bernard M. Dickens
